Capital Hails Stettinius Appointment

IMPORTANT CHANGES IN POLICY SEEN

Former Lend-Lease Boss's Popularity In Moscow Hints Bid To Soviets.

BOTH PARTIES PLEASED

New Undersecretary Expected To Accompany Hull To 3-Nation Talks.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Edward R. Stettinius, jr., took over the nation's second highest diplomatic post today amid capital speculation that his appointment indicated important developments are forthcoming in the foreign field.

Stettinius, lend-lease administrator, succeeds Sumner Welles as undersecretary of state. He is expected to accompany Secretary Hull to Moscow next month to meet Russian and British foreign ministers preliminary to a conference of President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin.

Stettinius, who sent vast quantities of lend-lease supplies to the Soviets, has gained widespread popularity in Moscow, and diplomatic sources here viewed his appointment as a strong bid for full Russian cooperation in postwar planning.

On Capitol Hill, the Stettinius appointment was applauded by members of both major parties. Many of the legislators expressed the view that by naming the former board chairman of the United States Steel corporation, President Roosevelt had restored harmony in the state department.

Over the week-end, Mr. Roosevelt also reshuffled the foreign relief and economic setups. He appointed former Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York a special presidential assistant to complete plans for next month's meeting of the United Nations relief and rehabilitation administration. And he consolidated, under Leo T. Crowley, of the Office of Economic Warfare, the lend-lease administration, the Office of Foreign Economic Coordination and the Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation.

Sen. Robert A. Taft, Ohio Republican, called the Stettinius appointment "an excellent choice" and said the Crowley appointment would strengthen economic policies.

The senate did not meet today and the house had a routine session scheduled.

Favor Draft Of Husbands By Age Class

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Sen. Styles Bridges (R) N. H., member of the senate military affairs committee said today there is growing support for legislation directing the army to induct married men by age classes.

This proposal, Bridges said, goes beyond the amendment to the Wheeler draft fathers deferment bill urged by Sen. Taft (R) Ohio. The Taft amendment requires calling married men 30 and under before those over 30 years of age.

"I find strong support for an amendment which would direct the army to induct married men by age classes," said Bridges. "Since the army prefers young men, it might call first fathers 18 to 21, then 21 to 23 and so on. If seems to me this proposition has merit and I'd be inclined to vote for it."

With the senate scheduled to open debate on the Wheeler bill tomorrow, Sen. Thomas (D) Okla., chairman of the appropriations military subcommittee, swung his support for the measure.

"I am in no sense opposed to the drafting of married men if they are needed, but to date the need has not been established before congress," he said.

Thomas predicted that not over four million men would be shipped overseas by the end of 1944 and that almost seven million men would be left at home. He disputed the army claim that five million men will be sent overseas by the end of next year.

"It is certain that we are now short of men to produce food and men to work in war production industries," said Thomas. "I cannot reconcile the fact that we need some seven million men in uniform domiciled in army camps in the states with little prospect of being sent to foreign service, when we are so badly in need of men to produce food and supply equipment."

Sen. McKellar (D) Tenn., chairman of the appropriations committee, however, opposed the Wheeler bill.

"I think our armed forces are doing a grand job and I hate to interfere with what is being done," he said. "I do think that if there are 100,000 men more or less of military age in the government there is no reason why 95 per cent of them should not go to war."

Sen. Bailey (D) N. C., planned to introduce a substitute for the Wheeler bill directing that all single persons of military age in the government be called before fathers are inducted.

BOY, 6, SHOT

Injured When Gun Goes Off as Brother Cleans It.

Six-year-old Paul Livingston narrowly escaped death at his home five miles south of Bellville yesterday when the shotgun his brother, Frederic, was cleaning accidentally went off hitting him in the ear.

The boy was sitting in a chair across the room from his brother at the time the accident occurred. The shot grazed the side of his head and took off the top portion of his ear.

He was taken to Mansfield General hospital for treatment where he was reported in "fair condition" today. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Livingston.

German Line Crumbles Along Dnieper River

Through crumbling German defenses the Russians today were forcing their way across the Dnieper river in the prelude to a drive to the old Polish border. As indicated on the map above, at (A.) the Soviets had stormed through fallen Smolensk, one of the mightiest fortresses in Europe, and were striking toward Orsha. At (B.) Stalin's armies were crossing the Dnieper to storm Kiev, old capital of Muscovy. At (C.) Poltava fell last week and the Russians pushed on to make first contact with the Dnieper river line. At (C.) the Soviets were also crossing the river near the site of the once great Dnepropetrovsk power dam. At (E.) the Germans admitted abandoning their bridgehead on the Kuban delta in an effort to get back into the Crimea.

Browder Says Russia Won't Give U. S. Bomber Bases.

CHICAGO- (AP)— It is an illusion for the United States to expect the Soviet Union "will be able or willing also to undertake the burden of the military struggle against Japan," Earl Browder, general secretary of the U. S. Communist party told a second front rally last night.

"All chatter about the Soviets giving us 'bombing bases' in Siberia is harmful nonsense," Browder continued, "with only one aim and end, to try to give the Soviet Union similar tasks in the Far East which she has performed in Europe, namely to win the war for us."

AIRPORT BOARD TO FILE REPORT

Appraisers Complete Work of Estimating Values of Land Needed For Port.

Appraisers of the 900 acres of land the city wants for its airport expansion project will be ready to report to Mayor W. J. Locke within the next two days, W. C. Mansfield, one of the three realtors named to appraise the land, said today.

The mayor said he expected to meet with the trio Tuesday afternoon to go over the valuations and reach an over-all cost estimate to prepare the city for negotiating with the land owners.

Working on the appraisal with Mansfield were Edward A. Schmitt and Marion Shaull. They have been working on the project for more than two weeks and have completed the actual estimates at the site. Mansfield said the three would submit a joint report to the mayor.

First cost of the property, which includes nine farm houses, was placed at $100,000, but the city has hopes of obtaining it for less than that in view of the $42,000 it is being asked to provide for the removal of Mansfield Telephone company and American Telephone and Telegraph company lines.

LITTLE FELLOW HAS BIG BOND JOB THIS WEEK

$311,263 Still To Be Raised If County Reaches Goal By Next Saturday.

SIX DAYS LEFT IN DRIVE

More Purchases By Individuals Needed To Assure Success, Chairman Reports.

Six days to go and $311,263 to raise with the task largely on the shoulders of the "little fellow."

That in brief was Richland county's situation in the Third War Loan drive today, as campaign workers made final plans to wind up the drive for a $6,060,000 goal by Saturday.

Today's report showed $5,748,737 of the quota already on the books. At the close of business Saturday, sales for that day totaled $187,893.75 with 1,361 additional subscribers making up that amount.

As the drive neared its goal Chairman H. G. Brunner said "The amount still needed in the drive will have to come from individual purchases. Large corporation purchases have already been made and it is now up to individuals to give the drive a final push over the goal."

In Washington today, the government started on the last lap of the drive after War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes warned the nation that, unless a large part of next year's estimated $40,000,000,000 excess purchasing power is absorbed in bond purchases, there will be an impoverishing inflationary spiral.

The drive for 15 billion dollars ends this week. As of Saturday night, $13,300,000,000 had been raised. Brynes warned however, that only $2,800,000,000 of that was furnished by individuals, 56 per cent of their quota.

He termed it only "common sense" to invest a large portion of excess purchasing power in war bonds for a rainy day.

"If, when the war is over, we have a business depression, the bonds will insure you against want," he said. "If good times continue—as all of us hope—the bonds can be used to purchase those things which will make for a higher standard of living."

Axis Propagandists Hit By British Note To Argentina.

BUENOS AIRES—(AP)—A British foreign office statement expressing strong disapproval of Argentina's neutrality policy struck a sharp blow today at Axis propagandists here.

Nazi sympathizers long have conducted a whispering campaign that Britain regarded Argentina's failure to break negotiations with the Axis with complacency if not approval. The statement from London, however, left no doubt about Britain's true position.

"His majesty's government * * * hope that in the international sphere the Argentine government will at an early date range herself wholeheartedly on the side of the freedom loving nations," said the statement.

Yanks Drive 10 Miles Into Mountains East Of Key Italian Port As Allies Approach Big East Coast Air Base; U. S. Bombers Blast Emden.

BULLETIN

MOSCOW—(UP)—Russian parachute troops were reported showering down on the west bank of the Dnieper today while the Red army battled for several crossings and invested the last German positions on the east bank before Kiev, Kremenchug, Dniepropetrovsk and Zaporozhe.

(By Associated Press)

German troops began withdrawing today from the sea around Naples as American Fifth army forces slashed another 10 miles into the mountains to capture the town of Cassano, 50 miles straight east of Italy's second greatest port.

Front dispatches said the Germans had started flanking their positions around the broad bay of Naples and the port itself and were offering only rearguard opposition. When slackening German artillery fire signalled the withdrawal, the Americans immediately began pressing the retreating enemy.

Allied headquarters announced meanwhile that British troops driving swiftly up Italy's Adriatic coast against little enemy opposition were within 22 miles of Foggia and its vital air base system which the Germans already have abandoned.

Thus in 24 days the American and British invasion forces have pushed up approximately one-sixth the length of the Italian peninsula.

In its broadcast communique, the German high command admitted that Nazi troops on the eastern side of the mainland were retreating "undisturbed by the enemy" after destroying traffic installations but declared that attacks northeast of Salerno were repulsed.

By taking Cassano, American troops holding the right flank of the Fifth army advanced to a point 18 miles northeast of Salerno and only 10 miles from Avellino, one of the enemy's major communications centers.

While the German withdrawal northeast of Salerno gave the Americans an opportunity to drive a wedge between the enemy's forces there and those closer to Naples, the fighting on the coast north and northwest of Salerno was bitter and at close quarter.

Reports from the front said that the battle was fiercer than anything seen in the Middle East, North Africa or Sicily since the British breakthrough at El Alamein and that three or four miles of rough mountain country had to be taken by British units on the Fifth army's left flank before they could reach the Naples plain.

"This fighting resembles some of the historic battles of the first World war when strongpoints in some sectors had to be taken by hard frontal assault," said an Allied military spokesman.

A communique from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters said the town of Cerignola, about six

Tokyo Suggests Base Falls, But Allies Report Attack on Main Defenses.

(By United Press)

Tokyo radio suggested today that the Japanese base at Finschhafen had fallen but latest Allied reports said Australian troops were assaulting the main defenses of the New Guinea coastal stronghold.

A Japanese high command communique said their naval planes raided Finschhafen and Allied landing points three times during the week-end, indicating Allied troops now hold all or most of the base.

The last word in official Allied reports placed the Australians on Friday little more than a half-mile from the base while two other columns nearly completed an encirclement by pushing inland almost 10 miles and marching up the coast from Lae 30 miles to Hanisch Harbor on the south.

Melbourne radio quoted Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey, Allied ground force commander, as saying Finschhafen's fall was only a "matter of time." Melbourne said Allied losses through New Guinea had been lighter than expected and Allied forces were BOSTON—(U.P.)—With less than a 50-50 chance of survival, three-year-old Earl Mace, jr., of Roxbury, a hemophilia victim, will have his right leg amputated today, at the Boston Floating hospital.

Earl, who has become the mascot of 400 army officers trainees at Tufts college in Medford, was injured in a fall in August.

Many of the army trainees have donated type III blood to prepare Earl for the operation. Doctors explained that the danger in this operation resulted from the boy's hemophilia condition which prevents blood clotting.

Driver Files Suit In Auto Crash Which Killed Three.

Arthur Preston Milliron, one of the two survivors of a two-car head on collision which killed three persons July 30 on Park avenue west road, today filed suit for $51,175 against L. Harry Beam, administrator of the estate of Orlo and Lottie Rush, victims of the accident.

In his petition, Milliron alleges that Mrs. Rush's negligence in the operation of her automobile caused the accident and damages to him amounting to $51,175.

His five causes for action claimed Mrs. Rush was driving on the wrong side of the road at 50 miles per hour wth glaring headlights, that she did not blow the horn of her car to warn him of its presence on the wrong side of the road and that Orlo Rush was negligent in not warning his wife of the approach of the Milliron auto.

Nazis Have Given Up Hope Of Winning War, M'Narney Says

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—German military leaders have given up hope of winning the war and are directing all their efforts toward staving off defeat, Lieut. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, army deputy chief of staff, told a conference of industrial, labor and newspaper leaders here today.

"Our air offensive against Germany," he said, "has forced them to make a decision which will be full of meaning to you production men. The combined bomber offensive against Germany has forced the Germans to drastically reduce the production of bombers and to concentrate on the production of fighters.

"To every thoughtful member of the German air force, this step could have but one meaning —that Germany had given up hope of winning the war and was turning her every effort to keep from losing the war. This step, taken months ago, was the first visible evidence that Germany had abandoned the offensive and was seeking through defensive action what at best could be only a stalemate."

McNarney said seizure of the initiative by the Allies gave them the advantage of being able to strike the enemy when and where they chose but this was partially offset because German and Japanese operations are on interior lines.

Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson told the group of 200 that the next 12 months will be costly in blood and men "but will determine the future of the world."

The conferees were called to Washington to hear a confidential war report by ranking army offi-

Reformatory Gets 'NS' Award For Its War Record Tomorrow

Inmates of Mansfield reformatory, who have been doing their part in the nation's war effort even though they're behind the walls of the institution, will receive official tribute of the war production board tomorrow.

The tribute will be the "NS" or national service award, which means to the reformatory the same thing that an Army-Navy "E" would mean to private industry.

Presentation of the NS flag is scheduled for a ceremony starting at noon, Arthur L. Glattke, superintendent of the institution, said today. The presentation will be made by Garrett Heyns, Lansing, Mich., director of Michigan's correction commission. R. R. Bangham, manager of the manufacturing and sales of Ohio institutions, will be the principal speaker. Glattke has been in charge of arrangements for the ceremony.

Also taking part in the program will be Chaplain M. W. Wappner and O. F. Garver, assistant superintendent.

A four-ply program at the reformatory has been responsible for the award, according to Glattke.

miles above the Olfanto river in the southern Foggia plain, fell to the British Eighth army in its latest thrust. A Cairo broadcast placed the Eighth army vanguard within 18 miles of Foggia.

The capture of Foggia's main air field, well equipped for all kinds of day and night operations, and its 12 satellite landing strips would give the Allies a valuable base from which their bombers could attack the enemy at any point in the Balkans and as far north as Germany itself.

Lt. Gen. Mark Clark's Fifth army units also captured Calabritto, another town northeast of Salerno and 27 miles in from the coast, while Muro, 18 miles northwest of Potenza and 32 miles east of Salerno, was overrun by British troops moving up on the Eighth army's left flank.

The headquarters communique said Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's troops in the center of the solid Allied line extending from the Tyrrehenian to the Adriatic were "still in contact with the enemy just north of Atella," the capture of which was announced yesterday.

Dispatches to London from a Reuters correspondent with the Fifth army said British naval units had joined in the battle for the mountain passes leading to Naples, blasting German positions from off shore while American and British artillery pounded the enemy from behind the Allied lines.

The air war over western Europe gained momentum as American Flying Fortresses roared more than 200 miles across the North sea to batter the German shipbuilding center of Emden in their second straight daylight raid, carrying U. S. air force operations in Britain to a new high for a single month.

It was the 10th Fortress raid this month, equalling the peak reached by the B-17s in July, and since the American medium Marauders have been out 19 times in the past 27 days, compared with six times in July, the month of September is by far the biggest of the war for U. S. 8th air force bombers.

RAF Mosquitoes struck at targets in Germany's Rhineland during the night and in yesterday's operations the American four-engined Fortresses pounded a big enemy airdrome and repair base at Rheims, 80 miles northeast of Paris, while American Thunderbolts ranged over northern France in widespread supporting sweeps, encountering absolutely no fighter opposition and only light anti-aircraft fire.

Elsewhere around the world:

Only the broad Dnieper river stood between Russia's conquering Red army and the tottering Ukrainian capital of Kiev, while half a dozen other points on the crumbling German line extending 750 miles along the river from the Kuban to Smolensk were threatened with imminent capture by Soviet forces.

Although Berlin announced that the Russians had crossed the Dnieper at several points, Moscow said merely that they had reached the river at Kiev, at the great bend near the power center of Dnepropetrovsk and at several points in between.

The Berlin radio said a sharp clash developed in the English channel off the French port of Fecamp early today when British motor torpedo boats attacked a German convoy. The report, unconfirmed by British officials, said several of the attacking boats were damaged but made no mention of German losses.

Stockholm dispatches reported without confirmation that rebellious crews had sabotaged three of Germany's prize battle wagons, the Tirpitz, Scharnhorst and Leutzow, as they lay at anchor in Norway's Alton fjord after the surrender of the Italian fleet.

In Burma, Allied airmen attacked Japanese rail and river communications in widespread daylight forays yesterday without losing a plane.

The Allied air offensive against the Germans in Italy was slowed for the first time in weeks because of bad weather.

In spite of this, a few American Mitchells dived through clouds to bomb enemy troop concentrations near Sarno, at the southeastern foot of Vesuvius, and RAF fighter-bombers attacked trucks beside the road.

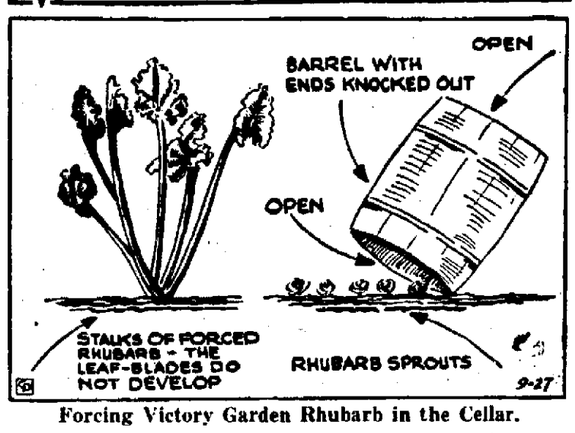
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Forcing Victory Garden Rhubarb in the Cellar.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
(Released by Central Press Ass'n.)

There is much interest this fall in cellar gardening and many Victory gardeners will try their luck with it. Rhubarb is one of the vegetables from the Victory garden that is easy to force and therefore it merits a place in a cellar garden.

Rhubarb roots use for forcing should be at least two years old and if even older roots are used the resultant yield is apt to be larger. Roots to be used for forcing should be dug up late in the fall. They are left out-of-doors until they have experienced a light freezing. After this they can be forced in any room or cellar having a temperature of 50-60 degrees.

The lifted crowns may be packed in large pots or boxes with soil between them to fill in the spaces. Give the crowns a good watering and later if they appear to be drying off too much give them additional light sprayings of water. Good stalks should be available in four to six weeks. As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, the leaf-blades do not develop on forced rhubarb.

Early crops of rhubarb are also available by covering the crowns in the opening ground with a barrel, as illustrated, and mulching around it with a thick layer of fresh stable manure to provide warmth. The barrel protects the tender rhubarb sprouts from the wind and cold. The open tops of the barrel permits the sun's rays to reach the rhubarb and under these conditions its growth is forced by many weeks.

held superior to the enemy in every department.

Allied planes based in the Solomons resumed heavy bombardments of the Japanese positions on Bougainville, in the north, and Kolombangara, sending strong forces against the islands Thursday and Friday and shooting down at least nine planes. A communique said 345 enemy dead had been counted on tiny Arundel island, off New Georgia.

A delayed dispatch by Walter L. Briggs, United Press correspondent at a northeast India base, revealed that American engineers were pushing the construction of a new Burma road within the shadow of the Himalayas.

Protected by Chinese troops, the engineers were said to have started the epic project to build a war supply route to China on Dec. 15, 1941.

Concurrently, the monsoon that drenches Burma through the summer appeared abating and Allied air forces stepped up their attacks on Japanese communications in anticipation of a coming land offensive.

and ripped up road junctions in the area of Benevento and Colle northeast of Naples. Still others flew as far as the east coast to strike at motor transport north of Foggia.

British Liberators and Halifaxes from Middle East bases continued the Allied air offensive against enemy targets in the Balkans by raiding the Kalamaki airdrome near Athens Friday night, a Cairo communique disclosed, and Beaufighters hit Syros harbor in the Aegean yesterday, leaving a merchant vessel smoking.

Axis Celebrates By Warning Satellites

LONDON —(AP)— The two surviving Axis partners — Germany and Japan—observed the third anniversary of the signing of the tripartite pact today by putting on a show of unconcern over Italy's capitulation, but with a warning to satellite powers not to follow the Italian lead.

In the warning addressed to those who believe that "one war partner can simply step out of the war car if it no longer likes the driver," the newspaper Voelkischer Boebachter, Nazi party organ, said:

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1943.

The "Terrible Turk" doesn't seem so terrible, since he became a pole sitter.

Now that the Germans have been driven out of Sardinia, there may be some sardines to pass around.

Belated State Department News

THERE was news in the announcement Saturday night by the president that Edward R. Stettinius had been named under-secretary of state, but there was none in the announcement that Sumner Welles, veteran diplomat, had resigned.

All the country had known for weeks that Welles was no longer with the state department—and the president's announcement was only belated official confirmation of something that everyone knew.

The correctness and wisdom of the Stettinius appointment will have to be left to time. He succeeds a capable man.

The manner of Welles' leaving however, and the method in which it became public knowledge is bound to prove confusing to the American people. With as much attention being focussed on post-war problems at the moment as on the actual fighting of the war, the American people are entitled to be entrusted with more confidence on the part of the government than they were given in this instance.

Today's Bismarck

A GREAT-GRANDSON of the great Bismarck, who unified Germany and in successive wars defeated Denmark, Austria and France, has signed an appeal to Germans to overthrow Hitler. He is one of the National Committee for a Free Germany, sponsored by the Russians.

While a natural supposition is that most of the names on the list are Communist, this may not be so. The name of the Bismarck descendant, Lieut. Count Heinrich von Einsiedel, does not sound proletarian. It is also reasonable to assume that in their efforts to overthrow the German governmental structure, the Soviets do not limit themselves to aid from simon-pure Communists.

Bismarck was no particular believer in freedom, but he was too wise to indulge in the Nazi mania for persecution. He got his way without purges, concentration camps, or fantastic penalties for the crime of being a Jew. Bismarck believed in order, but not in tyranny. He might have seen some merit in his descendant's stand.

Shoes And Feet

IT IS GOING to be a longer time between shoes for some millions of American women. The OPA has ruled that a pair must last six months now instead of four. Men won't mind so much, because they are more interested in warmth and protection for the feet than women are. It seldom occurs to an ordinary man to buy shoes primarily for ornamental purposes.

Even so, by rational standards, a dispassionate observer from Mars might not rate men's winter footwear as much more sensible than women's. For men stick to the low-ankle shoes dictated by current style, regardless of cold weather and cold feet, whereas women generally put on overshoes when it's cold and wet.

One of these times, though, there may be a return to old-fashioned shoes by both sexes. You hear men now, occasionally, complaining that "their brains seem to be in their feet" and when the feet are chilled it slows down mental work.

One World

THE veterans of the first World war were quite in order, and also in line with history, when they adopted this resolution at their convention last week:

> "Our own national interests must ever be our first concern, and we believe that our nation can best serve and protect its national interests, commensurate with its power and responsibilities, by participation in the establishment and maintenance of an association of free and sovereign nations, implemented with whatever force may be necessary to maintain world peace and prevent a recurrence of war."

The American people considered that problem at the end of the last war, but failed to act on it because of a bitter controversy in the United States senate. Technical progress and tragic events have now swept this nation beyond partisan and provincial considerations. Statesmen realize clearly now that, whether we like it or not, the world is a unit, and modern civilization must rise or fall as a whole. In such a situation it is inevitable that this powerful nation face the facts and play a leading part.

Peril Off Canada

THE WAR has been nearer than we thought, and lately, too. Earlier the submarines were a constant peril off our shores. This year they have been pushed back, and now the menace seems to have passed. Yet as lately as last June German subs laid 60 magnetic mines outside of Halifax harbor in Nova Scotia. This has been revealed by the Canadian naval minister, Angus L. MacDonald. He adds that the mines were discovered before they did damage, and have now been cleared away.

Though the war goes well there may yet be some unpleasant surprises.

Revival of 'Abie's Irish Rose'

ONE of the year's minor mysteries is the enormously popular stage revival of "Abie's Irish Rose." Wherever it goes, it sells out the houses. The mystery is mostly in the minds of the critics, who think it as bad a play as ever—over-sentimental and with little pretense to reality. Yet people go to see it in droves, laugh heartily, and like it no end.

There is something about the play with all its slapstick and forced sentiment that takes hold of people. Its first production ran five years in New York, breaking the record of that time. Since then, Tobacco Road, the tragedy of the southern sharecroppers, has beaten it.

Apparently today people like Abie and Rosie as much as ever. It may be that they like the play's lesson of tolerance. They like its tender humanity, too, the clean and kindly humor which carries neither shame nor sting.

After all, by most dramatic standards Uncle Tom's Cabin was a bad drama. Yet perhaps no play in American history has been performed so often for so many interested theater-goers.

THE BLANKET IS TOO SHORT

Presidential Candidates Facing Trouble In Details of Alliances

By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Most of the candidates, including possible Draftee Thomas E. Dewey, for the Republican presidential nomination next year have gotten, for the time being, very close together on the post-war international co-operation to maintain peace platform.

It is true that Dewey has come out in favor of an alliance, but even that is a bit on the nebulous side until more details are written in, and one must always remember that it is the details which play havoc with all international agreements. Nations agree willingly, "in principle," but when it comes to implementing the ideas they have approved, another story arises.

In all probability, looking ahead through the nine months before the Grand Old Party names its standard bearer, it is likely that the details of international co-operation are more apt to trip any given candidate than all other possibilities put together.

Anti-British Sentiment Decreasing.

For one thing, public interest is becoming more and more centered on the post-war set-up to maintain peace. Very few people have in their minds a definite plan. Most people, even if they have not thought it through that far, have very definite prejudices. Some are terribly opposed to Britain, down in their hearts. They do not trust "Perfidious Albion." There are not as many of these as there used to be, and Winston Churchill has captured the imagination of the United States to such an extent that Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, recently ejaculated to a few friends: "Why isn't that man a Republican!"

Whether this vanishing of old animosities will last beyond the last day of the shooting, whether it will exercise a benificent influence over the period of the peace conference, is something that only a seventh son can foresee.

Then there are many Americans who simply do not trust Russia. Not the fighting Russia which all admire, but the infiltrating Russia which is able to produce demonstrations in London the day Winston Churchill returned from America, demanding a second front NOW.

Curously enough there is far more vocal, though probably less numerous crowd, which is now concentrating against the State department, and before that screamed against Admiral Darlan and for General Charles De Gaulle. This might be called the intellectual left wing group, but it includes many editors of outstanding newspapers and magazines, many commentators and columnists. Just how much of a following this group has there is no way of knowing, for the moment, but presumably it is important.

Idealistic Group Difficult To Satisfy.

Now any plan which runs at all counter to this group's very sharply defined pattern for a post-war world is going to be torn to pieces over the radio, in the newspapers, and on the hustings. This prospect is not a pleasant one as one hopes for not only temporary, but perhaps lasting peace, for it is not easy to match together the practical things national governments will be willing to concede with the idealistic notions which this group will think are absolutely essential.

This group, for example, will think it of the essence that the government set up eventually in Italy, in France, in Jugo-Slavia, shall be "liberal" according to their construction of the word. And this will apply not only to the belligerents, but to neutrals. For instance, imagine their rage if Franco is still dictator of Spain, and his government becomes a part of the new international set-up!

There are a lot of rungs in this ladder which may cause nasty falls to presidential aspirants eager to get on the front page!

Price of Greatness

"THE price of greatness is responsibility." We so need to be reminded of the fact.

We all want to be great. That desire is as much a part of us as our craving for food and sunshine, and from the time we are babes we have magnificent dreams of what we are going to do and be some day—dreams that lift us far beyond the dingy streets and shabby clothes and dreary jobs which may be our lot. Hollywood itself never conjured up more glittering visions than those which fill the heart of any average youngster. But we forget one thing—

We forget that there's a price to pay.

We're sold on success slogans. We think that greatness will arrive suddenly through some miraculous stroke of luck—that it will come automatically, dolled up in all its splendid trimmings. And when t comes all our troubles will be at an end. We will be proud and content, freed from our fears and weariness.

We believe this because it has become the American tradition. This has been a land of fabulous achievement, of sudden leaps to fame. We have seen so much success that it has turned our heads. We have forgotten the fundamental rules of life.

WE HAVE FORGOTTEN THAT NOTHING IS FREE AND LEAST OF ALL SUCCESS

For however glittering success may seem to the bystander, it's not glittering inside. True greatness is never comfortable. It's always the toughest test we can face.

"The price of greatness is responsibility" . . . and responsibility is a 24 hour pain in the neck. It's a grim grind—an endless challenge and contest.

Our fathers knew this. They learned it the hard way. This nation was not achieved in one spectacular gesture. It was made by millions of monotonous motions—by the swing of a million axes—by the drive of a million shovels and the thud of endless booted heels. And the more they built, those first Americans, the more they had to build. For they were fighting worse things than desert heat or winter frost or Indian raids. They were fighting human greed and laziness and discouragement. They were fighting themselves. They wanted greatness but they had to pay for it over and over every second of their lives.

Dave Boone Says:

THAT bedtime saying, "The customer is always right," appears to have been grounded for the duration. THE story that has come out of Washington about certain "White House advisors" planning to put army war production under General Somervell so it can be used as a political lever in 1944 has a nasty smell. But that's the kind of egg that must be expected from a bureaucratic hen.

Douglas Scores for United States In Shipping Debate With British

WASHINGTON—Although the recent Quebec conference ended most harmoniously, there was some plain-talking before it was over as there must be between allies. One debate was on the question of troop transports and the problem of shipping several million men across the Atlantic and Pacific for various military fronts.

It is no secret to the enemy that troop transports are the bottleneck of our military operations, and that the big passenger ships of pre-war days—the Queen Mary and the Queen Elizabeth, for instance—are considered just about as important as battleships. That was why the sinking of the Normandie was such a victory for Hitler.

So at Quebec, the question arose as to what proportion of U. S. troops would be hauled by the British and what by American transports.

Lord Leathers, British minister of shipping, set forth his position at one of the allied staff meetings, indicating that the British, short on transports, would have to go a bit slow on certain troop-hauling.

Opposite Lord Leathers sat wiry Lewis Douglas, ex-congressman from Arizona, who once quarrelled with Roosevelt over "baloney dollars," resigned as director of the budget, now has come back as one of his ablest administrators of war shipping.

"Now look here, Fred," Douglas interrupted Lord Leathers, "you know that is not true. You know that you've got——"

And Douglas reeled off a long list of British tonnage. He had it all right on the tip of his tongue. Apparently he knew more about British shipping than Lord Leathers, or at least more than Lord Leathers pretended to know. Without ruffling anyone's feelings and with his usual gracious charm, Douglas cited facts and figures, all of which his lordship had to admit. In the end, Lord Leathers came round to the American viewpoint.

Afterward, Gen. B. B. Somervell who once staged a cat-and-dog fight with Lew Douglas as to who should control shipping to the war areas, came up to him. This time Gen. Somervell was not hostile.

"Great job, Lew," he said, patting him on the back.

Note: Most heart-breaking Italian incident from a shipping viewpoint was the action of two U. S. bombing planes on a return trip from southern Italy. Below them, nestling snugly at her berth, lay the prize Italian passenger liner Conte di Savoia. The fliers, not realizing the nature of the ship or her value to the allies as a troop transport, released their bombs. A few seconds later, a ship able to carry 10,000 U. S. troops to a 2nd front, was under water. A few days later, all the Italian navy surrendered.

The Church and Italy.

The apostolic delegate in Washington has called in representatives of the American committee for Italian democracy for a private but significant talk.

The delegate, who is the Pope's representative in the United States, took the occasion to criticize the Knights of Columbus for passing a resolution that only Catholics should be sent to Italy in connection with the allied government of occupied areas in Italy.

"We want no religious discrimination of this kind," said Monsignor Cicognani. "And I cannot conceive why the Knights of Columbus should adopt such a resolution. It certainly does not represent the views of the Church."

It was suspected in New York political circles that the Knights of Columbus resolution against having non-Catholics as U. S. governing officials in Occupied Italy was aimed at Lt. Col. Charlie Poletti, a Baptist, now the leading American member of AMG, the allied military government for Italy. Poletti, former lieutenant governor of New York, is reported to have done an A-1 job in Sicily.

Members of the American Committee for Italian Democracy are of various religious faiths, Judge Pecora being an Episcopalian, and Dr. Frank Gigliotti a Presbyterian minister. Mayor LaGuardia of New York is an Episcopalian.

Note: Healthy sign of religious harmony near Washington was the invitation extended to St. Mary's Academy in Alexandria, Va., by the Baptists when the Catholic school building was taken over by the Alexandria hospital. The Baptists said they were not using their three-story hall, so invited St. Mary's Academy to use it. The invitation was accepted.

Hull's Triumph.

One of the neatest victories in Secretary Hull's entire foreign policy record was his rebuke to the Argentine government when it asked for lend-lease aid. Few people realize, however, that a wreath-laying ceremony played a large part in that diplomatic triumph.

The Argentine appeal was prepared by the Argentine foreign Minister, Admiral Storni, who was so confident of the persuasiveness of the note that he suggested it be published, after Washington officials had time to study it.

But Hull and his advisers found loop-holes which Storni had not seen, and they prepared the blistering reply which the world knows about. This note was brought to Storni as he was leaving the foreign office, dressed up in frock coat and striped trousers, to lay a wreath at the statue of a Brazilian hero. It was Brazilian independence day, and Storni was performing one of those duties required by diplomacy.

Storni was told that Washington desired to publish both notes. Not having time to read the U. S. note, he waved his assent, and got into the waiting car with his wreath of flowers.

When he came back and read Hull's stinging rebuke, Storni tried frantically to prevent its publication. But it was too late. It was also too late for him to save his post. A few days later he resigned.

CHINESE VIEWPOINT

DO YOU like to imagine yourself in the other fellow's place? One of the rarest new books, for fun and for thinking about, is the best seller, "Between Tears and Laughter" by the Chinese author, Lin Yutang. It gives an understandable glimpse of what we call "the Oriental mind."

The war, according to Mr. Yutang, has only one issue—empire versus freedom. The emerging of Asia—Russia is half Asiatic—is the greatest single fact of this war. Imperialism is on its way out. Two world leaders exemplify opposite poles of thought — Chiang Kai-shek for whom "patriotism is not enough" — and Winston Churchill, for whom it is.

The common people of all countries want peace. Peace cannot be arrived at by mathematical formulae or scientific experiments, or point rationing. Neither can it be solved like a game of bridge . . . "In the dark, anything that moves may be a mouse's tail. . . ."

There is hope in a democracy; because the leadership there is always marking time and waiting for the people to push or prompt . . . if pushed from one side he totters to the other and if the people push just right he becomes "a great man." Meanwhile, like a gadfly, each of us may have his influence upon the course of things—which is why books are written.

This author is not worried that America will not be able to assert a leadership of force and power; he is worried lest she may. He dreams of an America that assumes a moral leadership—a humble, gentle, friendly, undemanding leadership that all the world may bless . . . a leadership that, like a peaceful river, gives life to the myriad things along its banks, and grows greater by asking nothing in return.

The good in men can outweigh the evil. Happiness follows goodness as a shadow that never leaves it.

Peace is a lady. She stands on our threshold but she will not enter where our leaders are courting and drinking with the harlot, Power. Power has magic . . . she is opulent and beautiful . . . but not all the leaders are tipsy yet. Will the voices of soldiers for peace be heard in time?

(To do more than hit a few high spots in this space is impossible. The book is published by John Day Co. at $2.50.)

That New Suit That Ernie Bought In St. Paul, Complete With Zipper, Only Led to Trouble.

WASHINGTON—There has just occurred to me a horrifying adventure with a pair of pants. I shall try to recite it just as it happened, because it's a funny story. It wasn't funny then, but it is now.

We might as well start at the beginning, out in St. Paul last summer, when I bought my new gray suit.

I bought it there because it was in St. Paul that the bottom fell out of my old pants; and because I like to show off as a much-traveled young man, and say casually: "Oh yes, this tie came from Germany, and I got this green sweater in Portland, Me., and these gloves in Knoxville, and my white socks in El Centro, Cal., and these shoes in Indianapolis, and this gray suit I picked up in St. Paul."

It was a nice suit, and it had two pairs of pants. One with buttons up the front, the other with a zipper. I had never had a zipper on a pair of pants, and I thought that was hot stuff. The super-super salesman, clinching the deal, said: "This is one zipper that works, too, and don't you forget it."

So I bought the suit, and was measured for alterations. I picked up the altered suit at 5 that evening, and left St. Paul early next morning without trying it on.

They had altered it, all right, but they altered it down to the point where I couldn't get into it. It cost $6 to have it altered back up.

But that isn't the story. That's just a build-up for my later troubles. The real story is about that zipper.

The zipper never did work very well. It ran like a cog-wheel train off the track. It made a ripping noise, and you had to pull with all your strength to get it up or down. And it kept getting worse.

The other day, when I put on the suit after it had come from the cleaners, it took me five minutes to close the zipper. That should have been sufficient warning, but my mind was on other things, so I went down town wearing those pants.

During the morning I had occasion to work the zipper, and lo and behold, it wouldn't budge. I was stuck. I yanked and I pulled and I tugged, but no go. I pulled so hard that the little metal tab cut a gash in my thumb.

Finally I had to call for help. An ex-football player on our staff, by wrapping a handkerchief around his thumb, and bracing himself, while I pulled up on the top of the pants, managed to get it open.

By that time I was thoroughly alarmed, and I kept within calling distance of aid all through the day. It happened twice more before evening. I had to get a government clerk, and a fellow in a garage to help me.

When I got home I decided to get out of those pants right away. But I couldn't get them off! The zipper wouldn't move.

We had a dinner guest, a great big fellow, and he thought he could zip the zipper all right. He was just a fool. He couldn't even get it started. He cut his thumb on the metal tab, and got mad, and I got mad, and I don't know what might have happened if I hadn't thought of the hammer.

I got the hammer, and had him slip the claw over the tab, and then while I pulled on top of the pants with all my might, he pushed down on the hammer. It sort of worked. The zipper came open about half an inch at a time. We were going along pretty good, when suddenly the metal tab collapsed under the strain, and bent up in a half circle, and the hammer claw wouldn't stay on it.

So from then on, after every heave with the hammer, I'd have to work the tab up over the edge of the kitchen table, and he'd hammer it down flat again. We got the zipper open in a little less than half an hour.

I didn't put on the other pair of pants, the one with the buttons. I didn't eat any dinner, either. Didn't feel like dinner, somehow. I just went to bed, and turned out the lights, and lay there with my jaws clenched, glaring at the darkness. After a while I went to sleep.

It's beginning to look like old home week for Mansfield Braves in the Cleveland Indian camp as the Tribe nears the wire in the American league race for second place.

With Hank Edwards doing some timely and consistent slugging while filling the shoes of the ailing Jeff Heath, Steve Gromek recalled from Baltimore for a bit of relief hurling, and Gene Woodling brought up from Wilkesbarre, the old Braves now have three representatives in the tepee.

Gromek and Woodling broke into the lineup in the same game one day last week. Gromek was tapped for six hits and four runs in two innings, but the paper did say that four of the hits were the measliest kind of bloopers.

Woodling got a single in two trips to the plate, driving in two runs, but he failed to star afield. The paper said he misjudged a fly on his only chance

Maybe fate was ogling the optic when Gene, who succeeded Edwards as batting champion of the Ohio State league, replaced Hank in centerfield in the game last week.

In spite of his one failure afield, Cleveland's boss men apparently are not worried about his fielding skill.

According to the Plain Dealer's Gordon Cobbledick, the Cleveland club has heard that Woodling is a fine ball hawk and a good hitter.

The fact that Woodling has led every league he has played in at bat, bears out the fine hitter report. After pacing the Ohio State in 1940 he led the Michigan State in '41, was out of baseball with a broken ankle in '42, and this year he led the Eastern with a mark of 354.

And Del Baker, Tribe coach, has taken it upon himself to test Woodling's fielding ability, so the story goes.

"I've hit him sinking liners, and I've hit 'em over his head, and to both sides of him, and he collars 'em all," reports Baker. And just from the tone of voice you'd gather the idea that the Indian coach s enthusiastic.

Oh, yes, Mr. and Mrs. Woodling are expecting the stork for the first time at their home in Akron in about three weeks.

Nelson Has Eye On Muzzle Target

T. Nelson led the Mansfield Muzzle Loader Rifle club Saturday with a percentage of 611 in six matches, nosing out G. Lantz by a tenth of a point. Cy Hassinger was third with 44.4.

Nelson also took the string measure match with a string of only 1.01 inches on added distance of three shots from center. T. Kelser was second ith 2.69 and Lantz third with 2.75.

Lantz won the 50-yard rest match with a 2.03 inch string for three shots. E. McNabb had 3.10 and E. Wagner 3.11.

Lantz took possession of the "Navy" cub for the next quarter, having the largest number of firsts in the first five matches of each shoot for the last three months.

Birds And Indians Tangle In Play-off

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—(AP)—On the records, Columbus' Red Birds go into the American Association Shaughnessy playoff finals beginning tonight slight favorites over the Indianapolis Indians.

Glen Fletcher of Indianapolis will oppose Ted Wilks on the mound in the opening game of the three-out-of-five series.

Columbus finished third in the American Association race, but trimmed the pennant-winning Milwaukee club three games to one in the play-off. Indianapolis wound up the season in second place, then had to go the full five games to eliminate Toledo, winning the last game of the other semi-final 2 to 0 yesterday in the Mud Hens' home park.

The winner of the finals meets either Toronto or Syracuse, now deadlocked at two wins each in the International league finals, in the Little World's Series.

Majors Still Hold Interest

Individual Honors Remain Undetermined.

By TED MEIER
(AP Sports Writer)

OUTSIDE of debating the relative merits of the St. Louis Cardinals and New York Yankees in the coming World Series, interest in the major leagues shifted today to the George Case-Wally Moses base stealing race and the Rudy York-Charley Keller struggle for the home run championship.

Case, fleet outfielder for the Washington Senators, stole three sacks yesterday to go one up on his rival from the Chicago White Sox. He has swiped 56 to 55 for Moses.

Charley Keller walloped two homers for the Yankees yesterday to boost his season total to 31. Unfortunately, from his standpoint, York likewise smashed out a couple of roundtrippers for Detroit against the Boston Red Sox, thus retaining the home run lead with 33.

Keller's roundtrippers helped the Yankees to a double win over the Cleveland Indians, 3 to 2 and 6 to 5 in 10 innings.

York belted his pair in a lost cause as the Tigers dropped a doubleheader to the Red Sox, 3 to 2 and 6 to 2. Jim Tabor connected with a 10th inning homer to win the opener. The veteran Tommy Bridges suffered his fourth straight loss in the nightcap.

After taking a 15-3 lacing in the first game, the Washington Senators rallied to beat the White Sox, 5 to 2, to split a twin bill. Case swiped his three bases in this game.

In the National league the Cincinnati Reds came up with two neat four-hit pitching performances on the part of Elmer Riddle and Johnny Vander Meer to beat the Boston Braves twice, 2 to 0 and 1 to 0.

Howie Krist continued his mastery over the Phillies as the Cards split with the Philadelphia club. Krist pitched a 4 to 1 victory in the opener, but the Phils took the nightcap, 3 to 2, in 11 innings on George Munger's wild pitch.

The Brooklyn Dodgers divided a bargain bill with the Chicago Cubs. Claude Passeau hurled a five-hitter for the Cubs in the opener, but lost, 5 to 1. Bill Nicholson paced the Cubs to a 5 to 3 triumph in the nightcap by hitting a double and his 27th homer of the season.

After Bob Klinger shut them out, 5 to 0, in the opener, the New York Giants beat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 4 to 3, in 10 innings to gain a split for the day.

The St. Louis Browns swept a doubleheader from the luckless Athletics, 3 to 1 and 1 to 0.

Galion-Marion Take Spotlight

SHELBY — Shelby Whippets will motor to Crestline on Friday night to play a non-league football game. Shelby has won two games already, defeating Norwalk, 42 to 0, and Willard, 26 to 0. Crestline lost to Galion, 32 to 6, last Friday and defeated Mt. Gilead, 26 to 0, in its opening game.

The eyes of the North Central Ohio league will be on the Galion-Marion Harding game to be played Friday night on the Orangemen's field. Both teams are undefeated. Galion walloped Tiffin Calvert, 33 to 6, and Crestline, 32 to 6. Marion nosed out Mansfield, 6 to 0, and Columbus West, 7 to 6. Harding is the defending champion of the league.

In pre-season dope so far, Galion, Shelby and Marion loom as the best contenders for the league championship. Ashland is also undefeated, but does not have as strong a team as the one last year which lost to Marion, 14 to 13.

Sport Roundup

NEW YORK—(AP)—The oddest letter in the collection of missives received by boxing's service athletic fund is one that has nothing to do with boxing. . . . Most of the boys write either to ask for boxing equipment or to express gratitude for the gloves, punching bags, etc. . . . Then along came one from Corp. Thomas Samaris, who identifies himself as a former New York high school basketball player. Now he's a member of a small detachment somewhere in the Pacific; he and his buddies had built a makeshift basketball court, using coconut logs, scrap lumber and salvaged twine, but they couldn't improvise a basketball. . . . "Please send us one," he asked, "any kind, just as long as it will bounce."

Stanley Frank, New York Post: "The 'T' formation was a great boon to football. It familiarized the gladiators with at least one letter of the alphabet."

Camp Grant, Ill., claims the only service football player of Japanese descent. He's Jake Kakuuchi, a 170-pound guard who used to play for Whittier college. . . . Lieut. Cy Kasselman, Pvt. Pete Rosenberg and Pvt. Herman "Reds" Klotz, who hooked up on the Camp Luna, N. M., baseball team this summer are former members of the Philadelphia Sphas pro basketbal loutfit. . . . That should be fair warning to any possible hardwood rivals.

WANTS GAMES

DAYTON — (AP) — Maj. C. O. Stipes, coach of the Patterson Field All-Stars, said he hoped to provide four or five football contests in the stadium at the University of Dayton which has abandoned football for the duration. One game already has been booked with the Bunker Hill Naval Training station of Peru, Ind.

Ray Malaska Defeats Mayer

Scores Upset, Taking Coolridge Club Title.

Biggest upset of Mansfield's golf season occurred at Coolridge yesterday when Ray Malaska defeated Joe Mayer for the club championship, 5 and 4 in the 36-hole final match

Mayer, who took the county championship at Westbrook two weeks before for the second straight time, was far off form yesterday in the morning round of 18, which saw Malaska taking the unbelievable margin of 9 up.

And Malaska is a hard boy to catch once he gets out in front, as Mayer discovered on the closing round.

Malaska went 3 up on the first nine, shooting a 37 to Mayer's 40, and then Ray really got hot on the second nine, clipping one stroke from par with a 33 while Mayer had a 39.

First line in the afternoon saw Mayer cutting two holes from Malaska's margin as a shot at 34 to Ray's 36. And Mayer cut down two more holes on the final round, but the holes were running out and the match ended on the fifth.

Pete Marcoff swamped Dick Gaubatz 9-8 in the 18-hole final of the championship flight, gaining revenge for a trimming handed him by Gaubatz in the Moose league last week.

Fritz Vogel won the championship of the fourth flight, defeating Frank Brucato 7-6. Hugo Brannon and Cliff Smith meet for the third flight title, Brannon upsetting Mike Mahalic 1 up yesterday in the semi-finals.

Battered Buckeyes Battle Missouri Next

Sensanbaugher's Injury Won't Keep Him From Practice Drills.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Ohio State's battered Bucks, still a bit baffled by the 28-13 beating handed them Saturday by Iowa's Seahawks in the opening game, will try to swing over to the winning side next Saturday as they meet Missouri here.

The "show me" squad also was victimized Saturday, falling before Minnesota 26 to 13, so the teams should enter the fray on even terms provided Dean Sensanbaugher, Ohio's scintillating freshman ball-toter from Uhrichsville, is able to play.

Sensanbaugher, wing-footed halfback, suffered an injured hand in the Seahawk fray, but Trainer Ernie Biggs said the left halfback would be able to practice this week. Should he be shelved, his duties will be taken over by Bob McQuade, 156-pound Columbus youth who tossed the pass for Ohio's second touchdown in the last half-minute of Saturday's contest.

The Seahawks, taking full advantage of their professional talent and Ohio's inadequate pass defense, gained three touchdowns through the air and one on a great run by Dick Todd, formerly with the Washington Redskins, to pile up a 28 to 0 edge. Then Sensanbaugher broke loose for a touchdown run, and McQuade's pass to Gene Clark, sub end from Columbus, gave the Bucks their 13.

The Missouri-Ohio state game headlines a seven-game program for Buckeye teams this week-end. The other games are:

Friday night: Miami at Xavier.

Saturday: Oberlin at Case, Central Michigan at Bowling Green, Bethany at Ohio Wesleyan, and Rio Grande at Otterbein.

Saturday night: Wooster at Baldwin Wallace.

Saturday's scores: Iowa Seahawks 28, Ohio State 13; DePauw 0, Oberlin 0; Baldwin Wallace 19, Case 6; Wooster 22, Ohio Wesleyan 14; Miami 34, Bethany 12; Bowling Green 40, Xavier 0.

NEW YORK — (AP) — Not only will Saturday's two big football games—Notre Dame vs. Georgia Tech and Michigan vs Northwestern—include four of the country's best teams but the turf at South Bend and Evanston will be torn up by some of the outstanding players of the young season.

Notre Dame has its Angelo Bertelli and Julius Rykovic in the backfield and Capt. Pat Filley, a watch-charm guard who is stronger than boiled coffee. The Atlanta Engineers counter with Eddie Prokop, who broke away on an 80-yard touchdown run last Saturday, and Center George Manning, plus George Steber, Vanderbilt great at guard last season but now at Tech.

Northwestern's offense is geared to Otto Graham, a student for another season as a navy trainee while Michigan's Coach Fritz Crisler dons dark glasses every time he scans his roster. Elroy (Crazy Legs) Hirsch of Wisconsin and Bill Daley of Minnesota, are two of his ball carriers and his line is combination of the Wolverine and Badger walls of 1942.

All four of the clubs won last Saturday, three of them spectacularly and Northwestern halting a weak Indiana eleven, 14 to 6. Michigan saw its all-star outfit romp to a 56 to 6 verdict over Western Michigan and Notre Dame made Pitt Coach Clark Shaughnessy sorry he revived the T-formation, 41 to 0. Georgia Tech, a pre-game underdog, mastered North Carolina, 20-7.

But all the A-1 talent won't be confined to those two gridirons Saturday.

Army unties Glenn Davis in its second home game for the benefit of Colgate and Mike Micka, a combination that spilled Rochester Saturday, 7 to 0. The Cadets tamed the Villanova Wildcats, 27 to 0, in their debut.

Navy verified every suspicion by blanking North Carolina Pre-Flight, 31 to 0, and next tackles Cornell.

A Duke team that romped over Richmond, 61 to 0, last week-end and now has counted 101 points to none for its two opponents, entertains the Pre-Flighters this Saturday.

Membership Tea of Mansfield League Held At Home of Mrs. Ernest R. Hartman; Mrs. Alfred Colby Second Speaker In Session.

WHEN the Richland County League of Women Voters held its annual membership tea Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Ernest R. Hartman, 121 Marion avenue, Mrs. Charles N. Bang, state president of the League was the guest speaker and was introduced by the local president, Mrs. D. O. Meese.

The speaker explained the policies and working of the League and told what non-partisan meant with regard to politics. She talked about the foreign policy of politics and the foreign policy of our government and the awakening of Congress to the importance of it.

Mrs. Meese also introduced Mrs. Alfred Colby, who urged a greater interest in re-registration for those whose registrations have lapsed. Mrs. Colby also called attention to the next meeting of the league, scheduled for Oct. 4, when candidates of both parties will present an open forum.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, Sept. 28.

With vigilance, harmony and exceptional skill and sagacity the affairs of this day are likely to fall into safe, progressive and productive grooves, although there may be stubborn obstacles, and opposition from elders or superiors. There also may be loop-holes for fraud and duplicity. Frankness and good nature may arrest the antagonisms and suspicion, while logic and astute decisions may avert loss.

Those whose birthday it is, although possibly hampered or worried by tenacious obstacles, aggravated by the antagonism of superiors, employers or elders, may secure its place and fortunes by clever or skillful manipulation of tricky, depressing or stagnant situations.

A child born on this day may have much skill, talent and mental grasp of frustrating circumstances which it should use to avert difficulties and antagonisms in both private and business life.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"We already have done these things," my father said, glancing at his wrist watch to make sure that he was giving us enough time to get to Hal Meredith's office before the expected arrival there of Ruth Hayes.

"We have commissioned a man to rent an apartment or room or vacant store opposite the restaurant where Marion gave the message to Crump, the waiter. Judging from their recent actions, the men will take Marion out again to a restaurant—probably this same one, since she expressed a liking for it. They evidently are working on what they believe is a letting down of the barriers on her part."

As Good as Done.

"I'm not going to ask: 'Suppose you can't get a vacant spot opposite the restaurant?'" Marion's haggard stepfather said, "for knowing you, the thing is as good as done."

"Thank you," my father answered, and I knew that his omission of a disclaimer was not due to vanity, but to his innate confidence that he would succeed in his venture, a confidence springing from a knowledge of his own power and resourcefulness.

"As soon as the vacant spot is secured," my father went on, "there will be guards there night and day, ready to snatch Marion away from the gangsters the second they have the signal."

"You said Marion was disguised," Harry Underwood interrupted, and my father's eyebrows did not contract at all in the displeasure which he usually shows at an interruption. "Will those guards be able to—"

In his turn, my father interrupted quickly.

"The look-out place will never be without someone who knows Marion," he said "Ronald, yourself, Richard, Noel—all of you can take turns watching with the guards. Other guards will be on hand at the restaurant, ready to co-operate with us. Does that answer your question?

The big man hesitated ever so slightly before he answered

"Yes, yes, of course," he said hurriedly at last, 'except that I—"

He broke off abruptly, then began again.

"This man Crump—this waiter who brought the message — can you use him again, or are you afraid to trust him?"

"We shall have to use him," my father replied, 'and Margaret and I both agree that he seems a man to be trusted There was no need for him to bring us the note, you know. He could have given it to the gangsters if he were in league with them."

"Unless—" Harry said, and something in the way he spoke the word gave me the old familiar sensation of an icy finger trailing along my spine.

"Unless what?" my father asked quickly.

"Unless," the big man said slowly, "the gangsters purposely set the stage, knowing that Marion would try to communicate with us if she could, and they could have the man, Crump, report to them on our reaction to her letter."

My spine was thoroughly congealed by now, but my father's reply removed the icy finger.

"Of course we have to take that chance," he said, "but the odds are all against it, and besides, I still hold to the belief that they will bring Marion back to that restaurant whether or not Crump is their man. If he is, they will bring her back as a sort of goat staked out, hoping to get hold of Lillian or Margaret. If he isn't they will bring her back without knowing of our knowledge, but pursuing some plan of their own.

"No," my father finished, "I cannot agree with your doubts. We are taking a chance, of course, but I believe Crump is on the square, and he has promised to telephone us immediately if Marion comes into the restaurant, using the agreed-upon expression that 'Mrs. Graham's shipment of lace has arrived.'"

Underwood Reassured.

"I am glad of your opinion," the big man said. "I never have known your judgment to fail, and when bolstered by that of the Lady Fair"—he threw me a deferential smile—"I am doubly reassured."

"I am afraid," I deprecated, "that my intuition, not my judgment, is banking on Crump's sincerity."

"All the more reason for my banking on it," Harry Underwood said gallantly, and then he turned back to my father.

"That part in Marion's letter about signals," he began, and once more my father interrupted him.

"That, of course, means that she saw the personals in the newspapers, and wishes us to put in some more," he said. "I am happy to tell you that nine copies of a personal to her are even now on their way to the papers. Margaret, will you please read the personal that you composed, and that is now on its way?"

I read the personal slowly, and then explained its meaning in terms of the old code invented by Marion and Mary.

"Very ingenious," he said approvingly when I had finished, 'and no doubt will give Marion much comfort."

Then his features stiffened into stern resolution again.

"But it isn't enough," he said. "The danger is too imminent. I must take a hand myself, and play my ace. I should have done it before."

Eating Habits Do More Than Just Cosmetics

By MME. QUI VIVE

Orchids to beauticians, huzzahs for cosmetic chemists. They direct and assist the sisters toward the good looks goal. Fragrant creams oil the skin, tend to keep the surface smooth, make for cleanliness. From the rouge compact we extract an understudy for the natural blush. The pretty bottles, jars and boxes in the cosmetic cabinet give the time-fighter courage; they are her weapons against the old gent with the scythe.

But, hist, my friend! Cosmetics can do so much and no more. No fooling. If you don't eat properly, if you tear around to parties, lose sleep or have silly emotional fits, no beautifier can put you together. Many women put too much confidence in cosmetics.

Nothing but rest will overcome a look of fatigue. A facial may restore one for the time being, so that the night's heavy date can be met with a fairly fresh countenance. But, after a few hours the haggard look returns. Activity is necessary to health, but overdoing calls for rest, so the body can make repairs. The penalty for fatigue comes in the form of sagging tissues, dull, pouchy eyes, horrid little wrinkles, a sallow or grey complexion, lagging footsteps.

Preventing beauty ills is easy. You must live an organized life, be properly nourished, keep a proper balance of activity and relaxation, understand the tremendous need of mental hygiene. Getting rid of a defective appearance is a tough job, especially when it shows the ugly marks that come from wear and tear.

Individuals who are finicky eaters—and they are having a hard time these days—suffer from fatigue after only a small expenditure of energy. Many women are fussy and cross because they do not eat properly. They think every hand is raised against them, just because they are hungry.

Nutrition must be maintained in order to carry on the job. The boss of the culinary department must plan as she has never planned before. She may have thought it difficult to produce a varied diet in the old days of plenty, but now she is really up against it.

Food rationing has one good point, and we're not trying to be funny either. We're eating more fruits and vegetables than in the past. Most of us ate more fats than we needed. Have you noticed how some of your fatty friends are thinning.

Victory gardens are producing a variety of good foods. Papa used to stick up his nose at vegetables, but now, after raising them, he goes at them with gusto. Mama gets more vitamins, finds her complexion improving. More fish is served, and fish supplies many elements that are necessary for well-being. There's nothing to grumble about. Those who do grumble are not patriotic.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

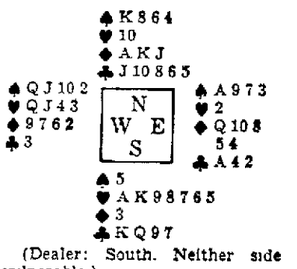
"The Authority on Authorities"

DON'T TRIP YOURSELF

There is just one purpose to a high original suit bid—what is usually known as a pre-emptive bid. It is to shut out opponents that you reckon are likely otherwise to find a fit between their hands and get into a game contract which they can make. Experienced players have found that this device does not pay with hands strong enough to justify a normal opening bid of one. There are two reasons for that. In the first place, when you hold such a hand, with its share of defensive values the opponents are not likely to be able to make a game. On the contrary, your high bid may shut your own side out of finding a fit at a successful game contract.



(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♣	2 ♦
3 ♥	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	5 ♣

And naturally that contract was made right on the nose, with the loss of no tricks except to the two black aces.

But the real point of the deal is not in what did happen, but what could have happened. South was seriously considering an original pre-emptive bid of 4 Hearts. If he had made that, North would have passed and left him in, reckoning that his own strength might prove just enough to render the contract makeable. South, according to the rule for such bids, had sufficient total playing strength, within three of the number of tricks for which he would have been bidding His refusal to bid that way was that his hand was not weak enough in high card strength.

With his club honors on the side, and the top two honors in hearts, his hand might be able to do its share in preventing a game if bid by the opponents. Also it might have proved very valuable in a No Trump contract, if North had the cards to justify such a declaration. Third, with a four-card length in a side unit, it was possible that suit might be a better declaration, which proved to be the case.

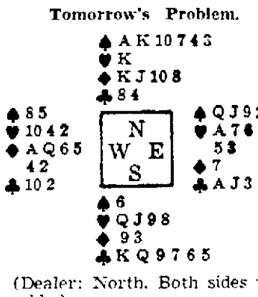
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

What is the best bidding by North and South on this deal, to picture their suit lengths accurately?.

BUILD 'TOKYO ROAD' THROUGH INDIA JUNGLES

American Engineers Hack Way To Burma as Supply Route For Allied Invaders.

(By Associated Press)

AN AMERICAN BASE ON THE INDIA-BURMA FRONTIER, Sept. 25—(Delayed)—Despite hills and high water, American army engineers—assisted by Indians and Chinese—have hacked a roadway through the jungle from India into Burma along which, if God and the strategists are willing, an attack upon the Japanese may be launched.

Headquarters call the highway the Ledo road, but engineers on the job call it the "Tokyo road" because, said Major John Moyer of Tuskegee, Ala., "The stuff transported over it eventually will wind up in Japan"—now some 3,000 miles away.

The road already has penetrated into enemy territory and Chinese soldiers, led and trained by American officers, are fighting the Japanese back further as construction progresses.

Its most immediate purpose is to supply attacking forces in the early stages of a campaign to clear the Japanese out of Burma. Its second purpose is to connect with the Burma road, if and when the Americans, British and Chinese manage to drive the Japanese out of the northern end of Burma so that supplies can reach China by land as well as by air.

Moyer, 29-year-old commander of an engineers battalion going one of the toughest assignments of the war, conducted Associated Press Correspondent Thoburn Wiant and myself over part of the road in one of the roughest jeep rides imaginable.

Pursuing a generally eastward direction, the road runs along the southern slope of the Himalayan range through some of India's thickest jungles.

Included among the engineering force are some troops who built airdromes in the Hudson Bay country before coming to this fever-ridden jungle country.

The trail goes through the heart of the head-hunting Naga tribal country, but that is only a minor problem, as most of the natives have proved friendly.

Near the halfway point on the road stands a camp sign reading "Ilkyindova." That isn't Hindu—just a composite abbreviation for Illinois, Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio and Virginia troops who were on the job there.

cers and war department officials who planned to explain the obstacles confronting the United Nations as well as give off-the-record accounts of the war's progress.

Patterson said it would be impossible to everestimate the part that American-made equipment has played in the many successes that Allied arms have recently achieved.

"I have just returned from the Pacific front profoundly moved by the difficulties undergone by our troops in that theater of war," Patterson said. "The fight there is to take strategic airfields."

Patterson said that during the early part of the war, efforts were concentrated on development of the long-range bomber program, the results of which are showing on every battlefront.

Patterson said industry and labor have done a magnificent job of production but a better job must be done.

The production of 7,612 planes in August, he said, fell behind the working schedule and the increase in production during the last four months has not been impressive.

HOLDS UP BILL FOR ROAD JOB

Auditor Says State-Favored Lawyer Asked $5,780 For Work He Didn't Do.

State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson today had held up payment of a state highway department bill which, he contends, would enable a favored Cleveland lawyer to collect from $2,175 to $3,280 for work he didn't do for the state.

The pay vouchers were presented to the state auditor for work done by an abstract title company in obtaining a right-of-way for a road to a bomber plant near Cleveland.

Ferguson said his investigation showed that the job had been let to Atty. Louis J. Doria of Cleveland who then "farmed out" the work to the abstract title office. When the job was done, Doria submitted a bill for $5,780 to the state highway department which was $3,280 more than the abstract title company asked Doria for the job.

When he protested to State Highway Director Hal G. Sours, the state auditor said the amount of Doria's bill was reduced to $4,675. The auditor, however, still refused to approve payment of either amount.

In a letter to Sours, he said: "It is my judgment that each of the foregoing vouchers is so excessive and unreasonable that if I were to issue my warrant, payable to Doria, an improper disbursement of public funds would necessarily result."

Ferguson said Atty. Doria admitted that all he did for the highway department in obtaining the right-of-way was to submit "some minor memoranda, including his signature."

He left here to go to Los Vegas about two years ago where he was personnel manager of the Basic Magnesium company. While in Mansfield, he was employed as a salesman for the Sunshine Biscuit company. He was a member of West Gate lodge, F. and A. M., at Columbus.

Besides his wife, formerly Doris Tucker of Mansfield, Mr. Tedrick is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Frank Mattox, 647 Scholl road; his mother, Mrs. Allie Tedrick of Grand Junction, Colo.; one sister, Mrs. Edward Whipple of Columbus; one brother, Damon S. of Grand Junction; and two grandchildren.

MAN INJURED

Basie Adams, John Long avenue, was treated at General hospital last night for head wounds believed by police to have been inflicted during an altercation with three other men on Bowman street.

Adams said he was talking to a girl when three men, only one of whom he could identify, got out of a car and attacked him. One of them struck him over the head with a glass jug, he said. Officers were investigating today.

RECEPTION SCHEDULED

SHELBY—Annual reception for the faculty of the Shelby public schools will be held Thursday at 7:30 p. m. at the First Methodist church under the auspices of the Shelby Ministerial association. The parties were started for the first time last year.

HOLD SERVICES AT BEER SCHOOL

Church services have been started by a Church of God congregation at the Beer school house in East Mansfield.

Until a church edifice can be built on land purchased by the congregation adjacent to the school property, the services will be held every Sunday at 3 p. m. Construction work on the church building is expected to be started within two weeks, church members disclosed.

Rev. Denny of Hayesville is serving as the pastor of the church.

OPEN EVENINGS

Auto Club Hours Lengthened For Driver Licenses.

As a convenience to war workers and others working on daytime shifts, the Richland Auto club office will remain open until 8 p. m. on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday for driver license applications, Jack Berger, club secretary, said today.

The sale of licenses is better than anticipated, Berger said, pointing out that only 12,239 licenses had been sold up to the end of September last year while 9,317 licenses already have been sold so far this year.

Berger pointed out that the cost of license plates will drop to half price for automobiles and trucks next Friday when the half-year mark is passed.

Fines Waitresses On Charges Of Sale To Minors

Two waitresses in a South Diamond street tavern were fined at noon today in municipal court after their counsel, Atty. L. H. Beam, entered pleas of guilty to charges of selling intoxicants to minors.

Mrs. Catherine May, 12 Florence avenue, was fined $100 and costs, and Mrs. Mona Butler, 385 Altamont avenue, was fined $25 and costs.

Mrs. May's fine was heavier because testimony brought out that she sold whisky to five youths under 21 while Mrs. Butler sold them beer.

The case resulted from an investigation of a hit-skip accident last week on South Adams street and the subsequent arrest of a 17-year-old Mansfield driver who said he and four companions had purchased liquor at the Diamond street tavern. The youths ranged in age from 17 to 20. Four of them tetstified today during the two-hour hearing in municipal court.

One of the boys said they were celebrating the night of the accident after learning that two of them had been accepted by the army.

Atty. Beam first entered pleas of innocent today for his clients, but changed them to guilty when the four youths testified.

RAISE CRY FOR GEN. M'ARTHUR

Senators, Back From Front, Demand He Be Made Chief of Pacific Operations.

(By International News Service)

LOS ANGELES—Five United States senators, back home after a 37,000-mile globe-circling tour of war operations, declared today Gen. Douglas MacArthur is the only man who can win the war in the Pacific in the shortest time and with the least cost of lives.

Sen. A. C. Chandler of Kentucky, echoing the views of the others, said "there must be a commander-in-chief who will carry out this strategy and he is Gen. MacArthur."

"Britain never has been enthusiastic about a major front in the Pacific," Chandler said. "When we were in England, Winston Churchill gave us no assurance of a genuine front for the India-Burma-China theater of war. We saw Lord Louis Mountbatten and his appointment as British commander was announced at that time.

"We don't know the extent of Mountbatten's command. He has not been in India and there has been no offensive there. But there is an offensive under Douglas MacArthur.

"It seems to me this theater of war should be one grand operation. I think it would be wise if those directing the war gave the command of that operation to MacArthur, who is now on the move and who has done a splendid job with the troops and equipment so far at his disposal. He will do a great deal more if supported."

Others accompanying Chandler on the war tour were Sens. Richard B. Russell, Georgia Democrat and chairman of the group; Ralph O. Brewster, Maine Republican; James M. Mead, New York Democrat, and Henry Cabot Lodge, Massachusetts Republican.

FACES CHARGE

Mansfielder Accused of Using Slugs In Parking Meters.

A long search for motorists who have been using slugs in parking meters today had brought the arrest of Robert W. Hannum, 131 South Willis avenue.

Hannum was taken into custody by police late Saturday after officers waited nearly an hour for him to return to his cab on West Fourth street between Walnut and Mulberry streets.

L. L. Kochenderfer, parking meter inspector, said he had effected a system to enable him to check on the persons who drop slugs in the meters and had been promised police help in putting an end to the practice.

Hannum, who was released under $25 bond is scheduled to appear tomorrow morning in municipal court.

FIVE DRIVERS GET CITATIONS

Five motorists, four of them accused of speeding, were cited over the week-end by state highway patrolmen and Mansfield police. Four of them were arrested on U. S. Route 42 northeast of the city and on Lexington avenue.

Released after posting $16.30 bond each for speeding were George W. Brennan, Houston, Texas; R. G. Kane of Youngstown, and Raymond C. Dzierwa, Baltimore, Md.

Fred Grimes, Cleveland, arrested yesterday by the state patrol on U. S. Route 42, was fined $20 and costs in Ashland police court.

In Mansfield, Mrs. Thelma Ciesla, Olivesburg road, paid a fine of $5 and costs for failure to have an operator's license.

SOLDIER DIRECTS SHELL FIRE ON PARENTS' HOME IN SICILY

One of the unpleasantest jobs that a soldier ever faced recently fell to Pvt. Joseph Crimaldi of Cleveland, nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Monastra, Mansfield, when he proved his loyalty to the United States by directing Allied gun fire on his parents' home in Sicily when the Americans were advancing on the village of San Agate.

Pvt. Crimaldi, who has visited his uncle and aunt here a number of times, lay on a mountain top above his home town in Sicily and told his captain where to direct the artillery fire on the town.

He saw an enemy ammunition truck moving into the village. It was near his parents' home and they might be inside, he thought. But it was his duty as an American soldier to inform the gunners in the rear where to fire to do the enemy the most damage. A gun was aimed at the truck near the house. A volley covered the home with dust and shattered the windows, missing the truck. He went about his duties in the hills, but his budies knew he was worried about something.

When they entered San Agate later he went to the little home that had been shattered by the shell. His father and mother ran out to greet him, but his grandmother didn't recognize him, even when she was told who he was.

His mother cried and his father took him in his arms and kissed him.

"Then Dad drew back, looked at me sternly and said, "Is this really my son come back to fight against his own country'?" Pvt. Crimaldi related.

"Then he laughed and shook hands hard. Dad's heart has always been in the right place, you know," Pvt. Crimaldi said.

As the Americans approached the village, the Crimaldi family had moved to the hills and escaped injury, the soldier learned.

Pvt. Crimaldi lived in Sicily six years before he returned to Cleveland in 1934. His father is Mrs. Monastra's brother. The Monastras, who have just received a letter from their nephew telling of his experiences, live at 521 Grant street.

NAZIS QUIT TRYING TO COVER UP REVERSES, SLAY DEFEATISTS

(By United Press)

STOCKHOLM—Nazi propagandists appeared today to have given up trying to hoodwink the German people about war reverses and to have launched a new line designed to keep the Reich fighting in fear of the consequences defeat would bring.

The Berlin propoganda mill tried to draw favorable aspects from their retreat in Russia, the Allied successes in the Mediterranean and the guerrilla warfare in the Balkans with scant success.

At the same time, the new Reich minister of interior, Heinrich Himmler, who developed the gestapo, was conducting a campaign of ruthless executions to combat defeatism.

Two principal reasons were believed behind the Nazi leadership's new policy of painting relatively frank pictures of their fronts:

1. A realization that the Nazi position would be weakened by ridicule if they try to belittle the current reverses.

2. A gamble with the weapon of fear to hold not only the home front but the Wehrmacht together but the admission of what might not on the conviction of victory happen with a shattering defeat.

The latest Nazi propoganda speculated the Germans would try to hold along the Dnieper but at the same time talked about a Riga-Odessa line.

An increasing number of death sentences were given prominent display in the Nazi press in connection with Himmler's campaign. Himmler reportedly believed propaganda minister Joseph Goebbels had fallen down on the job in trying to battle defeatism.

While most of the propaganda centered around the Russian front and the Allied air raids on Germany, similar tactics were used in relation to the Italian and Balkan situations. The Red army and Allied bombs, however, were Germany's primary bugaboos.

COLLECTS CARDS

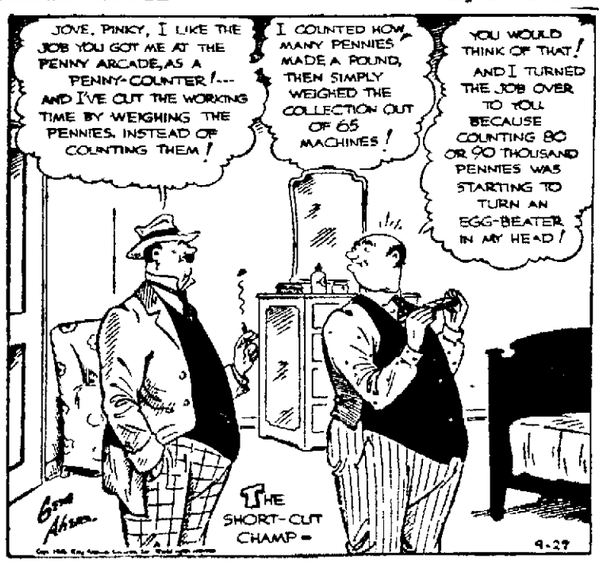
CHICAGO —(U.P.)— Dr. Morris Fishbein, of the American Medical association, probably is the world's only collector of odd and amusing birth announcements

Proud parents usually send birth announcements to the obstetricians who delivered their babies. Then, from all over the country, the doctors forward the cards to Fishbein. He already has more than 1,000 in his collection

AIR RAID WARDENS FINED

PASADENA, Cal.—(U.P.)—Air Raid Warden Philip Steinberg was fined $250 for not doing himself what he imposed on everyone else the necessity of doing. He left an illuminated sign ablaze in his furniture store window in violation of dimout regulations

JUDGE 'UFFLE— By Gene Ahern



JOVE, PINKY, I LIKE THE JOB YOU GOT ME AT THE PENNY ARCADE, AS A PENNY-COUNTER!—AND I'VE CUT THE WORKING TIME BY WEIGHING THE PENNIES, INSTEAD OF COUNTING THEM!
I COUNTED HOW MANY PENNIES MADE A POUND, THEN SIMPLY WEIGHED THE COLLECTION OUT OF 65 MACHINES!
YOU WOULD THINK OF THAT! AND I TURNED THE JOB OVER TO YOU! BECAUSE COUNTING 80 OR 90 THOUSAND PENNIES WAS STARTING TO TURN AN EGG-BEATER IN MY HEAD!

ARROW PRICE FLUCTUATIONS RULE MARKET

Demand For Plates, Sheets and Bars Dominate Steel Industry.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Narrow price variations predominated in today's early stock market transactions.

Up fractions at a quiet opening were U. S. Steel, Johns-Manville, Montgomery Ward, American Tobacco "B" and Loew's. Minor declines were posted for Anaconda, Sperry, Southern Pacific, Kroger Grocery and Chrysler.

Followers of the metals were encouraged by the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said that "demand for plates, sheets and bars dominates the market, with bookings running as far as six months, in the face of substantial tonnage for war purposes not yet scheduled but some of which will be required in fourth quarter."

CHICAGO—(AP)—Grains opened with little change today. Traders were expecting some congressional discussion of farm subsidies later this week and consequently were not inclined to take an active part in the market.

Wheat started ⅛ to ¼ higher, December $1.49⅛-¼. May $1.49½ and rye was ¼ lower to ⅛ higher. December $1.07⅝-¾.

37,000 Toledo Pupils Return to School as Strike Ends.

TOLEDO —(U.P.)— Approximately 37,000 Toledo school children who have enjoyed a holiday since Sept. 15 trooped back to school today with settlement of a strike by non-education school employes.

The schools reopened after a $20 increase monthly was granted 300 workers with the understanding that if a levy fails at the November elections, wages will return to the Sept. 15 level.

THEATERS

Woollcott Protege.

Sergeant William Roerich, seen in Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army," now playing at the Ohio theater, was a protege of the late Alexander Woollcott, who sent him to Broadway with letters of recommendation. In Role of Enemies.

George Sanders and Marguerite Chapman are enemies in Columbia's "Appointment in Berlin," but they fall head over heels in love when each keeps his appointment with destiny in the Nazi capital. Directed by Alfred E. Green, the exciting spy thriller, playing at the Madison theater, tells a sensational story of an RAF pilot who becomes the "Voice of Truth" on the German radio. On the same bill is "Stormy Weather," starring Lena Horne, Bill Robinson and Cab Calloway and his band.

Bataan At Ritz.

"Bataan" now showing at the Ritz theater with Robert Taylor in the featured role, depicts the courage of the defenders of that fortress against the Japanese. Co-feature is "Six-Gun Gospel" which stars Johnny Mack Brown.

Musical Movie.

"Follies Girl," starring Wendy Barrie and Gordon Oliver, and "The Falcon Strikes Back," with Tom Conway and Harriet Hilliard taking the feature roles, make up the bill at the Park theater. "Follies Girl," is making its first showing in Mansfield.

LOS ANGELES — (INS) — Wartime freight was on the move again today to and from the factories and shipyards of the Los Angeles area.

U. S. DISPOSES OF SEIZED ART

Sale of Chinese Art Pieces Grosses $500,000 For Government.

(By International News Service)

CHICAGO—Rich Chinese art pieces are being sold in Chicago by the U. S. government, at such a profitable and rapid rate that business has grossed more than $500,000 in 12 months.

"This is one government project that is in the black," said Edward C. Tefft, chief of the Chicago liquidation division as he reviewed the record.

The day after Pearl Harbor the government took over the Yamanako and company store in Chicago and two others in New York and Boston, owned by the seventh generation of the family of Ichagura Yamanaka, who opened a curio shop in Yokohama 200 years ago . . .

The stores were seized by the Treasury Department and turned over to the Alien Property Custodian.

The three corporations, capitalized at $550,000 had $1,500,000 worth of merchandise in stock, nearly all in rich Chinese art pieces.

The alien property custodian, Leo T. Crowley, named new directors and officers to take over management of the stores and set about liquidating them. It was decided to sell the merchandise at retail in the stores when offers of outright purchase and auction were considered too low.

Proceeds after liquidation will be held by the Treasury, Tefft said, until after the war. Congress will decide their ultimate disposition.

Enough revenue has been produced to pay $103,000 income tax $60,000 in dividends, and $62,500 to American landlords in rent.

MIX-UPS FEW

Mansfield on 'Slow' Time With Minimum of Confusion.

Mansfield apparently accepted the change back to "slow" time today with a minimum of confusion, although there were a few cases of office workers and teachers rushing out of restaurants when they found the proprietors hadn't turned their clocks back.

Ticket agents at the Greyhound bus station said they were operating on "confusion" time with the through Greyhound buses using war time and the Fairlick Stages changing to Eastern standard time. Greyhound representatives here were unable to say whether the company's bus schedules would be altered to meet the time change. Trains also continued to run on "fast" time.

Some Sunday school pupils forgot about the time change yesterday, too, and arrived an hour early. Little trouble was reported, however, at schools and offices where clocks were generally moved back Saturday night or Sunday.

DENVER —(INS)— Seven army fliers died in a bomber crash in residential South Denver, investigators said today, after the pilot's last act was to "try to keep from killing anyone else."

STORMY WEATHER

with LENA HORNE BILL ROBINS

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

WASHINGTON—Isolation has won the opening battle in the United States senate. The senate foreign relations committee has decided not to bring up now the Fulbright or any other resolution which would place the senate on record regarding America's collaboration with other nations after the war.

Chairman Connally of the senate foreign relations committee, says the committee does not desire at this time to afford opportunity for "intemperate and trouble-making debate" in the senate.

Clapper

He makes the significant explanation that there is unlimited freedom of debate in the senate and that "the disposition of some parties to drag in political considerations is already apparent."

Quite rightly, Senator Connally points out that international relations are delicate and sensitive and that this subject is too vital to the human race to be employed as a vehicle for either personal or political exploitation.

No question of Senator Connally's own position is involved for he has stated it repeatedly. He believes the United States must go with other nations in the use of force to prevent future aggression. He now reiterates his position in a statement so no equivocation in his own views is involved in this decision to try to smother senate debate for a while.

Westbrook Pegler's column did not arrive for publication today. It will be resumed tomorrow.

There is much in favor of the senate going definitely on record for some expression of policy such as is proposed in the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill resolution.

In view of the senate's rejection of the league of nations, other governments are acutely conscious of the president's limited power in entering into treaty obligations. In discussions with our government regarding collaboration after the war, they must look over the government's shoulder to consider whether the senate is ready to support the president. Secretary Hull says we must have a world agency supported by force but that issue was rejected when the senate last considered it. Would the senate again object? An expression of policy would be helpful now.

But Senator Connally makes it clear that he is afraid to risk the kind of debate that would occur. He is less concerned about the outcome than about what might be said during the debate. It is to avoid the kind of speeches that he thinks would be made by a few senators that Senator Connally wants to delay the whole question.

At least he wants delay until after Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin meet. Debate would be recurrent with questions as to Russia's attitude which could not be answered in advance of the meeting with Stalin. And we saw even in the house debate on the Fulbright resolution, under the severe restrictions of house rules, how the innocuous phrases of that resolution were used as a vehicle for some bitter observations about one of our allies. Such controversy in the senate might, in Senator Connally's judgment, have unfavorable effects on the necessary solidarity of the Allies in the prosecution of the war. He considers it too much of a risk to take.

Regrettable as delay is in this matter, it will be difficult to quarrel with the decision of the senators. When the chairman of the foreign relations committee indicates the senate cannot be trusted to discuss such a vital matter within the bounds of courteous and responsible discussion, but is likely to use it as a vehicle for personal and political exploitation, that is the judgment of a veteran of committee discussions. Senator Connally must have a fairly good idea of how the debate would run.

Perhaps, with important inter-Allied conferences soon to be held, and considering the military stage of the war, it is the part of discretion not to risk disruptive senate debate.

Yet there must come a time when the debate must be held and when it will be necessary to have the worst said that can be said—because any course that America and other nations adopt must be strong enough to withstand the speeches of isolationist senators.

WORLD POLICE PLAN LOSING U. S. SUPPORT

Policy Makers Favor Strong Peacetime Armed Forces By Separate Nations.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — There is a growing disposition among top policy-making officials here to discount entirely all talk of a world police force to maintain peace after this war.

In diplomatic as well as military quarters the view is frequently expressed that a peace-enforcing organization made up from the military and naval services of the United Nations would be unwieldy and impractical.

The counter-proposal to which this government is understood to be giving most serious consideration is that each of the United Nations, but particularly the United States, Britain, Russia and China, should keep in service land, sea air forces sufficient to discourage any acts of aggression.

This is the principle which underlay Secretary Hull's statement, in his speech on foreign policy earlier this month, that maintenance of peace must be based on the willingness of co-operating nations to use force if necessary.

Some officials say that in much talk of the postwar world the idea of a police force is used loosely to mean any employment of force to localize international disputes and avoid another general conflict. But in many instances the advocates of the idea definitely contemplate the organization of a truly international power to which all of the United Nations would contribute men and materials.

Officials claim this would not work because of the innumerable practical difficulties such as differences in language, traditions, and operational procedures of the world's existing armies and navies.

According to the principle broadly stated by Hull, each nation participating in some future world organization for peace—whether based on a system of alliances, a world court or a league—would support peace forcefully in two ways: by maintaining an army and navy able to cope with any predictable outbreak and by always being willing to use those forces when necessary.

Thus if two Balkan nations became involved in a dispute over boundaries and appeared unlikely to settle it by peaceful means, one of the great powers with the expressed approval of the others, would use its own forces if necessary to localize the dispute and direct an agreement.

If some future Germany or Japan developed new dreams of conquest and began to implement them one of the peaceful nations would move in, disarm the potential aggressor and take such other measures as the council of nations believed necessary to end the threat of war.

In such actions the role of the United States probably would be cast chiefly in the Pacific area.

OHIO CAN BE PROUD OF 37TH, MAJOR ASSERTS

Describes Heroic Effort of Division In Munda Battle, Praises Blood Plasma.

(By International News Service)

CLEVELAND—"The people of Ohio can be proud that they have such a splendid fighting organization representing them," Major Wayne P. Litz, 33-year-old divisional signal officer with Ohio's 37th division, asserted today.

Major Litz served through the entire campaign in the conquest of New Guinea in the southwest Pacific as a member of the staff of Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler, division commander and former state highway director.

Major Litz said that the Ohioans, in the drive on Munda, plodded through mud up to their hips, fought and slept in almost constant tropical downpours of rain, existed upon meager rations, and fought unseen enemies hidden in trees.

The 37th division officer was called to his Cleveland home in answer to a summons sent to him when his six-year-old daughter was injured Sept. 10 when struck by a truck. Until he walked into his home, he did not know the girl had died three days after being injured.

"Our men were beset by withering heat, flies and other insects that made life almost unbearable, and yet they came through." Major Litz declared in speaking of the New Guinea fighting. "Many of them lie buried where they fell in the jungles of New Georgia. Others rest in cemeteries carved out of the jungle.

"But don't get the idea they were not well taken care of. The medical care was excellent and army doctors worked day and night caring for our men. I saw blood plasma given under all kinds of circumstances and it is almost miraculous in saving lives."

Major Litz had the highest praise for General Beightler. He told of the selection of an advanced command post only 300 yards from the front.

Right now, Major Litz said, the Buckeyes are in a rest area. The major will be home for several weeks before departing to rejoin his buddies.

"With a fire-eater like General Beightler running the show, we'll be in Tokyo before long," he declared.

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

—Hi-Ya, Stranger!

(Want an earful?)

We've toured a flock of dazzling places in the galivanting trips we've made together in this column, we've ogled glamorous citizens and a few choice autographs; we've followed pretty neatly the pattern the Broadway chroniclers set up for a typical New Yorker. Now how about a long, cool drink and a chat? Here are a few choice tid-bits to take back home with you. Bend an ear to them before we get back on the merry-go-round.

Hark to the inside on that front-paged story announcing Betty Hutton's engagement to Charlie Martin, the youthful radio director. Charlie met Betty several months ago when she came to town to guest-star on his CBS Playhouse. Before the show they had dinner and by the time the salad was served, Betty had decided that Charlie was the man for her. This was four hours after they had met for the first time!

She said: "We're going to get married." Charlie thought it was a gag, naturally, and replied: "If you do a good show tonight, it's a deal."

Betty left for the Coast after the show to finish a picture, and telephoned Charlie every night after that. When she came to town last week-end for the Madison Square Garden bond rally, she got on the mike and introduced Charlie as her fiance to the 20,000 people present.

Charlie's first outburst to her when he talked to her a few minutes later is a classic. He moaned: "How could you do that, Betty- You know we can't get married—I'm going to be busy doing the new Gertie Lawrence radio show!"

Things like that couldn't happen back on Main Street, could they?

Henry Fonda is in town and wearing his naval uniform with plenty of pride. When he has a few hours to himself, he goes around visiting radio shows—Crime Doctor and Cavalcade and others. He sits in the control rooms and waves greetings to his cronies of the lean years—the years when stardom was only a vague dream.

But Hank isn't dreaming now. He says when this war is won and we're free to do the things we like, the motion picture industry is going to work closely with television. So, as often as possible, he gets close to television's sister, radio.

On one of these trips I'll take you up to the ball game and point out many of our fabulous Broadway citizens. They usually sit in the boxes just beyond third base, because the sun hits there most of the afternoon, and these lads love Old Sol—he reminds them of those winters in Florida during the years when money was free and so easy, and the trains going south were swell.

You'll almost always see a big fellow sitting up there who looks like Edward Arnold and seems to know everyone and has a ready smile. That's Connie Immerman—he used to own one of our biggest night clubs, Connie's Inn. Metro is going to do a picture about Connie. He was kidnaped once by the lowest of hoodlums, the cruel Jack Diamond. He lost $100,000 on the turn of a card to the fabulous Nick the Greek—and paid it without a murmur or a sigh. He financed the show business career of little Joan Leslie and her sisters and would never take a quarter for it.

I like Connie particularly for one thing—his great confidence in himself even when things aren't hitting on all cylinders. He can play any card game expertly, including outlandish ones like klabyash and cooncan. But when he loses he pays off with a grin and says: "Luck wasn't with me—but I'm still the greatest short card player in the world!"

SEES SURPLUS OF 35 MILLIONS

Tax Expert Says Ohio To Get Extra $45,000,000 But Part of It's Earmarked.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — Ohio's general fund for the 1943-44 biennium will have a net surplus of more than $35,000,000 unless state revenues decline unexpectedly, Tax Commissioner William S. Evatt said today.

Assuming revenues remain at present levels, Evatt said the state would accumulate about $45,815,000 above budgetary requirements by Dec. 31, 1944, based on general fund revenues of $83,945,249, or $15,271,915 above previous estimates, for the first eight months of the period.

A contingent appropriation of $6,000,000 for post-war highway construction and $4,000,000 which will have accrued for the school foundation program will reduce the anticipated surplus to approximately $35,815,000.

The state ended the last biennial period with a surplus of about $45,000,000.

Evatt said the surplus would have been cut considerably if the legislature had accepted Gov. John W. Bricker's recommendation to repeal the sales tax on restaurant food and prescription medicine. He added that sales tax income for the eight-month period produced $29,894,472 as against an estimated $19,333,333. Evatt attributed the disparity in part to increased prices, inflated purchasing power and relaxation of federal restrictions on production of civilian commodities.

When Johnny Appleseed junior high school pupils paid tribute to the pioneer apple planter on his birthday today they had a chance to look at a Bible which Johnny Appleseed carried on his travels. The Bible was obtained in Indiana by Mrs. Anna Long Onstott who gave an address during the exercises this morning. She also showed apples grown on trees planted by Appleseed and a gavel made from wood taken from an Appleseed tree. The gavel was a gift to the school from Prof. Robert C. Harris of Fort Wayne, Ind.

COUNCILMAN DIES

PAINESVILLE —(AP)— Earl D. Shepard, city councilman and chairman of a Lake county selective service board, is dead at 65.

OPA PROGRAM GETS SETBACK

Official Quits In Protest at Lack of Force In Restaurant Meal Price Control.

WASHINGTON—(INS)—The Office of Price Administration's restaurant price control program received another setback today with the resignation of Samuel G. Wennberg, chief of the agency's restaurant branch.

Informed sources said that Wennberg quit in protest against the absence of a forceful effort on the part of OPA policy-making officials to roll back exorbitant restaurant prices.

The program has been stymied for weeks, it was learned, by provisions of the Taft anti-grade labeling amendment and opposition of the federal budget bureau to a survey of restaurant price conditions.

Thus far, OPA's efforts in this important field of price control have been confined to "freezing" restaurant prices at the levels of last April 4-10.

Wennberg, it was understood, regarded the "freeze" as only a half-way measure which pegged prices at exorbitant levels. A strong advocate of a roll-back in restaurant charges, he attempted for many weeks to launch such a program, but without any appreciable success, it was said.

IN HOLLYWOOD-- By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—Note of the times: Cecil B. DeMille's private movie laundry (staffed by six property men) has been functioning smoothly so that "The Story of Dr. Wassell" will air no dirty linen.

The "Wassell" set lately has been a hospital ward, containing 60 beds, all occupied, which means 120 sheets, 60 pillowcases. At each day's end, the linen required changing. But because several other pictures at the studio also happened to be using bed linen, there wasn't enough to go around. And any housewife can tell you where even DeMille would get on a rush order from a laundry. He set up his own, and nightly — on the roof of the property department -his six trusty huskies wash and iron.

This is the second time the Old Master has licked the laundry situation. When the Japanese laundryman who had done his personal stuff for 20 years was hustled off to a re-location center, DeMille said he couldn't find a substitute who knew how to wash woolens without shrinking them. So he took over personally. I like to think of the great man going home to wash out his own socks!

Frank Borzage was directing Deanna Durbin and Franchot Tone in a long walkie-talkie scene for "His Butler's Sister." The two stars had to walk the length of a city block, conversing all the way.

The set was the outdoor "New York street" covered with black cloth to simulate night. The cloth flapped noisily in the breeze, and military planes roared high above, but the sound experts merely smiled. Their "directional mike" would blot out those extraneous noises.

And it did, but they still came to grief. All the takes were spoiled—so that the dialogue would have to be dubbed in later, by the swishing of Deanna's long evening gown.

If Preston Sturges doesn't laugh at actor shortages, he at least grins at them. What he did for "Hail the Conquering Hero," when he needed five husky Marines to tramp through the story with Eddie Bracken, was to make actors out of men who were "the type."

He took James Damore, a studio laborer who once had had a yen to act; Freddie Steele, the prize-fighter, for the role of a gruff, dead-pan Marine hero; Jimmy Dundee, an ace stunt man; Len Hendry, who has been stand-in for Bob Hope ever since Hope came to pictures. And for the fifth he found, walking into his office one day looking for a job, a youngster named Stephen Gregory, invalided out of the army with a background in stock acting and professional football.
